Known for its competent, committed, caring faculty, the University prides itself on its student-faculty ratio of 11:1. It also takes pride in its commitment to diversity. Some 32 percent of its students are members of minorities.

"The University of Bridgeport uses innovative technology to make every one on campus the eyes and ears of the campus security department," Howard K. Clery III, SOC's executive director and Jeanne's brother, said. "The university provides every student and employee with a personal alarm device that when activated signals the campus security department with their exact location. As a result campus security officers' response time is usually under two minutes. Over time word gets out and criminals know where not to go to commit crime." The PAD system flashes on the security station computer monitor a photograph and description of the PAD holder. Also, the location indicators adjust as the holder moves.

Committed to creating new learning venues, the University of Bridgeport's School of Continuing and Professional Studies and its Office of Distance Learning pioneered the first online graduate degree program in the State of Connecticut. A variety of online courses and certificate programs are also available.

Awards

The University of Bridgeport and the University of Pennsylvania are this year's recipients of the prestigious Jeanne Clery Campus Safety Award by the non-profit watchdog organization Security On Campus, Inc. Each institution was honored for their innovative uses of technology and other campus security improvements made in recent years.

There were many other safety efforts the award cited, including bicycle patrols, training and close working relationships with Bridgeport Police, Fire and Emergency Management departments and the Red Cross. Securitas Security Services USA, Inc., formerly Burns International Security Services, has provided campus security services at UB since 1994.
